There are those that say a problem can be solved with a hug.

There are those that say with love comes forgiveness.

I won't be deceived.

All artists that have moved people's hearts have all climbed out of suffering and loneliness.

I'm not an artist, but I want to always have the resolve to Histoire jusqu'à présent.

(The story leading to the present)

Several months after the execution, the father Baptiste's illness returned, and he left Paris with their grandmother, Marthe, making Charles the head of the Sanson household. Marie, as uninhibited as ever, received a subpoena from the imperial court. However, waiting to ambush Marie was a former subordinate of the general, who was insulted by his general's execution. Marie fought against the band of knights. Then, someone came to help her. Marie-Jeanne Bécu. A woman that watched over Charles' executions...

Meanwhile, Charles entered the room on their estate where he had been forbidden to enter. It was a 'room of atonement' with a cross for every person his father had executed where he came to offer prayers. Charles learned that his father had felt the same pain from "killing people" that he has. And then "the past" asked him, 'People are all the same. Go without fear and mix with people and spread your weight.' Then when he turned around, a woman that adored him was standing there. Charles now, seeking possibilities, attempted to open a door as a "male"...

Charles and Marie both carry crosses from their past. And in order to make their 'ideals' come true, they choose paths of hardship. And now, the power swirling around the Palace of Versailles is dragging the two of them into an ordeal—?!

In 1762, the 2nd daughter of the Sanson Family, Marie-Joseph made her debut as an executioner. Being executed was French Army General Griffin. While a crowd was drawing on the idea of a "woman" executioner, Marie had one thing on her mind. That is because long ago, Marie needed a "letter of recommendation from a high ranking official" in order to become an executioner, and the one that took advantage of her body in exchange for that was this man, General Griffin.

The general trembled in fear atop the execution platform. Normally, out of consideration of the convict's fears, decapitations have an etiquette of being done from "behind the neck", but Marie struck from "in front". But with Marie acting on her emotions on the execution platform, her father Jean-Baptist stopped her. Despite half of his body being paralyzed, Baptist stood upon the execution platform and performed a brilliant decapitation. The audience's boos at Marie became cheers for Baptist. Then, the father stepped before his daughter. 'Only hell awaits women who have stepped from the path of being a woman.' Meanwhile, in the Austrian capital of Vienna, a refined concert was being held. Here, a woman with the same first name, as well as the person that would later become queen of France, the young Marie Antoinette was proposed to by the genius musician Mozart—.

YOUR HIGHNESS DIRECTLY REQUESTED THAT THIS EXECUTION BE PERFORMED BY THE PREVOTE DE L'HOTEL, MY YOUNGER SISTER.
